MRS. CAUDLE'S CURTAIN LECTURES.

ontinued from our last issue. THE TWENTY-FOURTH LECTURE.

MRS. CAUDLE DWELLS ON CAUDLE'S "CRUEL NEG-LECT' OF HER ON BOARD THE "RED ROVER." -MRS. CAUDLE SO "ILL WITH THE SEA," THAT THEY PUT UP AT THE DOLPHIN, HERNE BAY,

"Caudle, have you looked under the bed! What for? Bless the man! Why, for thieves, to be sure. Do you suppose I'd sleep in a strange bed, without? Don't tell me its nonsense! I shouldn't sleep a wink all night. Not that you'd care for that; not that you'd -hush! I'm sure I heard somebody. it's not a bit like a mouse. Yes; that's like you-laugh. It would be no laughing matter if-I'm sure there is somebody! I'm sure

- "Yes, Mr. Caudle: now, I am satisfied. Any other man would have got up and looked himself; especially after my sufferings on board that nasty ship. But catch you stir-ring! Oh, no!, You'd let me lie here, and be robbed and killed, for what you'd care. Why, you're not going to sleep! What do you say? It's the st ange air—and you're always sleepy in a strange air? That shows the feelings you have, after what I've gone through And yawning, too, in that brutal manner! Caudle, you've no more heart than that wooden figure in a white petticoat at the front of the ship.

"No: I couldn't leave my temper at home. I dare say! Because for once in your life you've brought me out-yes, I say once, or two or three times; it isn't more-because, as I say, you once bring me out, I'm to be a slave and say nothing. Pleasure, indeed! A great deal of pleasure I'm to have, if I'm to hold my tongue. A nice way that of pleasing a woman.

"Dear me! if the bed doesn't spin round and dance about! I've got all that filthy ship in my head! No: I shan't be well in the morning. But nothing ever alls anybody but yourself. You needn't groan in that way, Mr. Caudle, disturbing the people, perhaps, in the next room. It's a mercy I'm alive, I'm sure. If once I would n't have given all the world for anybody to have thrown me overboard ! What are you smacking your lips at, Mr. Caudle? But I know what you mean—of course, you'd never have stirred to stop 'em: not you. And then you might have known that the wind would have blown to-day; but that's why you came.

"Whatever I should have done if it hadn't been for that good soul-that blessed Captain Large! I'm sure all the women who go to Margate ought to pray for him; so attentive in sea-sickness, and so much of a gentleman How I should have got down stairs without him when I first began to turn, I don't know. Don't tell me I never complained to you-you might have seen I was ill. And when every lady was looking like a bad wax-candle, you could walk about, and make what you call your jokes upon the little buoy that was never sick at the Nore, and such unfeeling trash.

"Yes, Caudle; we've now been married many years, but if we were to live together for a thousand years to come-what are you clasping your hands at ?-a thousand years to come, I say, I shall n ver forget your conduct this day. You could go to the other end of the ship and smoke a cigar, when you knew I should be ill—ch, you knew it; for I always am. The brutal way, too, in which you took that cold brandy-and-water-you thought I didn't see you ; but ill as I was, hardly able to held my head up, I was watching you all the time. Three glasses of cold brandy-andwater; and you sipped 'em, and drank the health of people you didn't care a pin about; whilst the health of your own lawful wife was nothing. Three glasses of brandy-and-water, and I left-as I may say-alone! You didn't hear 'em, but everybody was crying shame of

"What do you say? A good deal my own fault? I took too much dinner? Well, you are man! If I took more than the breast and leg of that young goose-a thing, I may say, just out of the shell-with the slightest bit of stuffing, I'm a wicked woman. What do you say? Lobster salad? La!—how can you speak of it? A month-old baby would have eaten more. What? Gooseberry pie? Well, if you'll name that, you'll name anything. Ate too much, indeed! Do you think I was going to pay for a dinner, and eat nothing? No. Mr. Caudle; it's a good thing for you that I know a little more of the value of money

"But, of course, you were better engaged than in attending to me. Mr. Prettyman came aboard at Gravesend. A planned thing, of course. You think I didn't see him give you a letter. It w sn't a letter; it was a newspaper? I dare say; ill as I was, I had my eyes. It was the smallest newspaper that I ever saw, that's all. But, of course, a letter from Miss Prettyman— Now, Candle, if you begin to cry out in that manner, I'll get up. Do you forget that you're not at your own house? making that noise! Disturbing everybody! Why, we shall have the landlord up And you could smoke and drink 'forward' as you called it. What? You couldn't smoke anywhere else? That's nothing to do with it. Yes; forward. What a pity that Miss Prettyman wasn't with you! I'm sure nothing could be too forward for her. No, I won't hold my tongue; and I ought not to be ashamed of myself. It isn't treason, is it, to speak of Miss Prettyman? After all I've suffered to-day, and I'm not to open my lips! Yes; I'm to be brought away from my own home, dragged down here to the sea-side, and made ill; and I'm not to speak. I should like to know what next.

"It's a mercy that some of the dear children were not drowned; not that their father would have cared, so long as he could have his brandy and cigars. Peter was as near through one of the holes as-It's no such thing? It's very well for you to say so, but you know what an inquisitive boy he is, and how he likes to wander among steam-engines. No, I won't let you sleep. What a man you are won't let you sleep. What a man you are! What? I've said that before? That's no matter; I'll say it again. Go to sleep, indeed as if one could never have a little rational conversation. No, I sha'n't be too late for the Margate boat in the morning ; I can wake up at what hour I like, and you ought to know that by this time.

"A miserable creature they must have thought me in the ladies' cabin, with nobody coming down to see how I was. You came down a dozen times? No, Caudle, that won't do. I know better. You never came at all. Oh, no! cigars and brandy took all your attention. And when I was so ill, that I didn't know a single thing that was going on about me, and you never came. Every other woman's husband was there-ha! twenty times. And what must have been my feelings to hear 'em tapping at the door, and making all sorts of kind inquiries-something like husbands |-- and I was left to be ill alone? Yes : and you want to get me into an argument. You want to know, if I was so ill that knew nothing how could I know that you didn't come to the cabin-door? That's just like your aggravating way; but I'm not to be caught in that manner, Caudle. No."

she talked two hours more: but, happily, the wind got suddenly up-the waves bellowedand, soothed by the sweet sullaby (to say nothing of the Dolphin's brandy-and-water), somehow sank to repose."

THE TWENTY-FIFTH LECTURE.

MRS. CAUDLE, WEARIED OF MARGATE, HAS A GREAT DESIRE TO SEE FRANCE. "Ar'n't you tired, Caudle?

"No? Well, was there ever such a man? But nothing ever tires you. Of course it's all very well for you; yes, you can read your newspaper and-what? So can I? And I wonder what would become of the children if I did? No; it's enough for the father to lose his precious time, talking about politics, and lords, and a pack of people who wouldn't care a pin if we hadn't a roof to cover us—it's well enough for-no, Caudle, no: I'm not going to worry you; I never worried you yet, and it isn't likely I should begin now. But that's always the way with you-always. I'm sure we should be the happiest couple alive, only you do so like to have all the talk to yourself. We're out upon pleasure, and therefore let's be comfortable. Still, I must say it: when you like, you're an aggravating man, Caudle, and you know it.

"What have you done now? There, now; we won't talk of it. No; let's go to sleep; otherwise we shall quarrel—I know we shall. What have you done, indeed! That I can't leave my home for a few days, but I must be insulted! Everybody upon the pier saw it. Saw what? How can you lie there in bed and ask me? Saw what, indeed! Of course, it was a planned thing! regularly settled before you left London. Oh, yes! I like your innocence, Mr. Caudle; not knowing what I'm talking about. It's a heart-breaking thing for a woman to say of her own husband; but you've been a wicked man to me. Yes, and ill your tossing and tumbling about in the bed won't make it any better. "Oh, it's easy enough to call a woman a 'dear soul.' I must be very dear, indeed, to you, when you bring down Miss Prettyman to-there, now; you needn't shout like a wild savage. Do you know that you're not in your own house—do you know that we're in lodgings? What do you suppose the people will think of us? You needn't call out in that manner, for they can hear every word that's said. What do you say? Why don't I hold my tongue, then? To be sure; anything for an excuse with you. Anything to stop my mouth. Miss Prettyman's to follow you, and I'm to say nothing. I know she has followed you; and if you were to go before a magistrate and take a shilling oath to the contrary, I wouldn't believe you. No, Caudle, wouldn't.

"Very well then? Ha! What a heart you must have, to say 'very well;' and after the wife I've been to you. I'm to be brought from my own home-dragged down here to the sea-side-to be laughed at before the world-don't tell me! Do you think I didn't see how they looked at you-how she puckered up her farthing mouth—and—what? Why did I kess her, then? What's that to do with it? Appearances are one thing, Mr. Caudle, and feelings are another. As if women can't kiss one another without meaning anything by it! And you-I could see you-looked as cold and as formal at her aswell, Caudle! I wouldn't be the hypocrite you are for the world!

"There now; I've heard all that story. I dare say she did come down to join her brother. How very lucky, though, that you should be here! Ha! ha! how very lucky that-ugh! ugh! ugh! and with the cough I've got upon me-oh, you've a heart like a sea-side flint! Yes, that's all right. That's just like your humanity. I can't catch a cold, but it must be by my own fault-it must be my thin shoes. I dare say you'd like to see me in ploughman's boots; 't would be no matter to you how I disfigured myself. Miss Prettyman's foot, now, would be another thing-no doubt. "I thought when you would make me leave home-I thought we were coming here on pleasure; but it's always the way you embitter my life. The sooner that I'm out of the world the better. What do you say? Nothing? But I know what you mean, better than if you had talked an hour. I only hope you'll get a better wife, that's all, Mr. Caudle You'd not try? I know you, I know you! In six months you'd fill up my place; yes, and dreadfully my poor children would suffer

"Caudle, if you roar in that way, the peo ple will give us warning to-morrow. Can't I miet, then? Yes-that's like your artfulness : anything to make me hold my tongue. But we won't quarrel. I'm sure if it depended upon me, we might be as happy as doves. I mean it—and you needn't groan when I say it. Good-night, Caudle. What do you say? Bless me! Well, you are a dear soul, Caudle; and if it wasn't for that Miss Prettyman-no. I'm not torturing you. I know very well what I'm doing, and I wouldn't torture you for the world; but you don't know what the feelings of a wife are, Caudle: you don't.

"Caudle—I say, Caudle. Just a word, dear. Well 7 Now, why should you snap me up in that way? You want to go to sleep? So do I; but that's no reason you should speak to me in that manner. You know, dear, you once promised to take me to France. You don't recollect it? Yes—that's like you; you don't recollect many things you've promised me; but I do. There's a boat goes on Wednesday to Boulogne, and comes back the day afterwards. What of it? Why for that time we could leave the children with the girls, and go nicely. Nonsense ! Of course : if I want anything it's always nonsense. Other men can take their wives half over the world; but you think it quite enough to bring me down here to this hole of a place, where I know every pebble on the beach like an old acquaintance -where there's nothing to be seen but the same machines—the same jetty—the same donkeys—the same everything. But then, I'd forgot: Margate has an attraction for you -Miss Prettyman's here. No; I'm not censorious, and I wouldn't backbite an angel; but the way in which that young woman walks the sands at all hours-there! there! I've done: I can't open my lips about that creature but you always storm.

"You know that I always wanted to go to France; and you bring me down here only on purpose that I should see the French cliffs just to tantalise me, and for nothing else. If I'd remain at home-and it was against my will I ever came here-I should never have thought of France; but,—to have it staring in one's face all day, and not be allowed to go! it's worse than cruel, Mr. Caudle-it's brutal. Other people can take their wives to Paris: but you always keep me moped up at home. And what for? Why, that I may know nothing-yes; just on purpose to make me

"Heaven bless the woman? Ha! you've good reason to say that, Mr. Caudle ; for I'm sure she's little blessed by you. She's been kept a prisoner all her life—has never gone anywhere-oh yes! that's your excuse-talking of the children. I want to go to France, and I

"It is very possible," writes Caudle, "that | got to do with it? They're not babies noware they? But you've always thrown the children in my face. If Miss Prettymanthere now; do you hear what you've doneshouting in that manner? The other lodgers are knocking overhead: who do you think will have the face to look at 'em to-morrow morning? I sha'n't-breaking people's rest

"Well, Caudie-I declare it's getting daylight, and what an obstinate man you are !tell me, shall I go to France ?"

"I forget," says Caudle, "my precise answer; but I think I gave her a very wide permission to go somewhere, whereupon, though not without remonstrance as to the place—

she went to sleep.

90 ARE THE BEST.

FEBRUARY 13, 1887. "Our Marvin's Patent Safe, & No. 9, double-door, stood the severest test in the large fire of Saturday night. It fell from the second floor, and was exposed to an INTENSE HEAT, FANNED BY A STIPE NORTH WIND. The exterior from frame-work meited in several places, yet the inside is not touched. We were pleased on opening it to find every thing ALL RIGHT. We have every confidence in the Fire-Proof Safes made by Marvin & Co. "WHITFIELD & BILLING."
